

CREATING YOUR RESUME

Your resume is an important marketing tool that communicates your experience, education, skills and accomplishments to a potential employer. The goal of a well written resume is to help you move onto the next stage of the job search -- the interview.

The Process of Developing a Resume

Sometimes the hardest part of developing a resume is starting the process. Here is a simple "checklist" outlining the process of creating an effective and professional resume:

- Gather information – names, places and dates of employment, education.
- Assess your skills and experiences related to the type of position(s) you are seeking.
- Outline your resume and organize effectively.
- Review and edit; ask for feedback and revise accordingly.
- Continue to revisit your resume and revise throughout your academic and professional career.

What Are Common Elements In The Resume?

There are basic elements which should be included on each resume you prepare; these have been indicated with an asterisk (*) below. Other categories will depend upon your individual experiences and skills:

Heading* - Include your name, address with zip code, and phone number. If you check your e-mail regularly, then include it as well. Indicate a present and/or permanent address, with phone number as appropriate. If both types of addresses are included, you may label as "Present" and "Permanent", or indicate the dates when each address is applicable.

Education* - Begin with your most recent education. Include:

- Name of college or university
- Degree to be earned (Bachelor's, Master's)
- Date you will graduate or anticipate graduating (month & year)
- Your major(s), emphasis area(s), and minor(s)

Indicate your GPA if it will demonstrate positive academic performance (generally 3.0 or above). You may choose to include your cumulative GPA and/or the GPA in your major. If you will not be including an Honors/Awards section, you could also include your academic achievements, such as semester honors, or if you will receive degree honors (Cum Laude, Summa Cum Laude).

Related Course Work - List related undergraduate or graduate courses, research papers, seminars, or independent projects that are relevant to the type of job you are seeking. This can also demonstrate projects you have completed related to your desired field. If you have extensive related experience, you might not need to include this section.

Experience* - Describe jobs, internships, student teaching, assistantships, clinical work, volunteer work, and research projects. For each experience include job title, name of organization, location (city and state) and dates. Emphasize experience most closely related to the kind of work you seek. Include skills used, scope of responsibilities and a description of your accomplishments. Avoid use of the personal pronoun "I" by using short phrases (not sentences). Use action verbs to highlight your skills and present yourself in a dynamic way. Be consistent with your verb tenses and avoid phrases such as "duties included" or "responsible for".

Other Categories - Include additional categories if aspects you wish to indicate about your related skills, education or experiences do not fit into the above mentioned categories. Possible headings might include:

- Certifications
- Honors and Awards
- Clinical Experiences
- Language Skills
- Committees
- Military Service
- Extra-Curricular Activities
- Personal Strengths
- Technical Skills
- Professional Memberships
- Publications
- Computer Languages

References

Do not list the names of individual references on your resume. Create a separate reference page (see the Appendix for an example). Select individuals who can attest to your work ethic, academic performance, skills and abilities. Ask individuals to serve as references prior to listing on your reference page. The statement "References available upon request" may be placed at the conclusion of your resume if desired.

How Do I Organize the Resume and Select a Format?

Organize your resume so your most recent and relevant information is viewed first. There are three basic resume formats from which to choose. You will want to select a format that will best allow you to convey your education, skills and experience as they relate to the position(s) to which you are applying and do so in a well-organized and easy to read manner.

The chronological resume format lists your education and experience beginning with your most recent. One advantage of this format is that it is easy for an employer to follow your work history. The chronological format also has some disadvantages. It can reveal employment gaps and might put an undeserved emphasis on areas you want to minimize. Also, skills are sometimes difficult to spotlight.

The functional resume (or skills-based resume) lists your experience under designated skill areas. One distinct advantage to this format is that it allows you to emphasize the skills you possess and you can downplay positions that are not related to current career goals. It also allows you to emphasize professional growth, and helps to camouflage a spotty employment record. A disadvantage to this format is that some employers will want to see additional work history information. Also, you may not be able to effectively highlight companies or organizations for which you have worked. This format is not recommended for teacher candidates or for recent graduates unless they have a great deal of related work experience.

The combination resume uses aspects of both the chronological format -- by listing work experience by dates -- and the functional format -- by highlighting experience under skill headings. The combination format allows you to stress your preferred and most relevant skill areas, and at the same time satisfies the employer's desire to know names and dates of your work history. The combination format has one distinct disadvantage -- it takes longer to read, and an employer can lose interest unless it is very succinctly written and attractively organized.

How Long Should My Resume Be?

Your resume should be long enough to highlight your related skills, education and experience in a concise, yet complete manner. Some individuals can accomplish this through a one-page resume; others may need a two-page resume to convey the extent of their related skills and experience. Keep your resume to two pages at most, as an employer will not want to read more than that. Remember to edit critically, and keep your resume short and easy to scan.

Saving and Printing Your Resume

The key is to have a professional looking resume. Career Services recommends using a blank Microsoft Word document (or equivalent word processing program) to create your resume. Avoid using templates provided in word processing programs, as they are not always tailored to meet the needs of a college student or recent graduate. Use a quality laser printer and print your resume on good quality, 8 ½" x 11" bond paper. Copies can also be made at a print shop. Be sure to print on one side of the paper only and do not staple the pages of your resume together.

Items Not To Include On Resume

- Present Date: Include in a coverletter.
- Picture: Provide only if it is essential for a job, such as in modeling or theatre.
- Race, Religion or Political Affiliation: Include only if it is the main thrust of your resume or a bona-fide occupational qualification.
- Personal Data: Height, weight, marital status.
- Salary History or Requirements: If this is requested from an employer, state your salary history or requirements in your coverletter.
- References: As noted before, develop a separate reference page. (See Appendix)

Sending Out Resumes

Each time you mail a resume, include a cover letter. Do not staple your resume, cover letter or other application materials together. Refer to Career Services' "Writing Professional Letters" handout for assistance in writing cover letters. It is best to not fold the resume or cover letter; therefore, use a 9" x 12" envelope. Every time you mail a resume and cover letter, make a record of it so you can refer to this list for future reference.

Positive Aspects of High Impact Resumes

- Visually appealing and easy-to-read (concise) and consistent format
- Clearly indicates your career aspirations and goals
- Focuses on the employer's need and states the skills, education and experience you offer
- Uses descriptive action verbs
- Emphasizes job-related skills and transferable skills, not only past/present job duties
- Highlights accomplishments (i.e. "...increased sales ___%", or "promoted to team leader")

Most Common Resume Pitfalls

- Too long and contains excessive, unnecessary content
- Too short, crowded and condensed
- Poor layout and physical appearance, poor quality of printing
- Use of narrative ("I")
- Misspelled words, bad grammar, poor punctuation
- Lengthy phrases, sentences, and paragraphs
- Too many dates or numbers, which make it difficult to read
- Dishonest or lacks credibility and content
- Content does not support objective
- Critical categories missing (i.e., "Where's the Education section?")
- Hard to understand or requires too much interpretation (unclear objective)
- Unexplained time gaps
- Does not convey accomplishments

Resume Critique Checklist

1. Does the resume appear neat, organized and professional? Is the text balanced on the page? Have you avoided having your text cramped or crowded onto the page?
2. Are spelling, grammatical and typographical errors eliminated?
3. Could the resume tell the same story if it were shortened?
4. Does the resume avoid generalities and focus on specific information about education, experience and skills?
5. Do examples qualify and quantify experiences? (i.e. "Manage a $5000 activities budget." or "Counseled 25 disadvantaged 12-year-old students.")
6. Is the objective supported by the contents of the resume?
7. Is relevant experience adequately discussed and is unessential information de-emphasized or deleted?
8. Is information highlighted in a consistent manner using indentation, bold type, underlining, or capitalization?
9. Is your most recent education listed first?
10. Do your statements start with action verbs?
11. Are you sure your resume is not exaggerated?
12. Have you eliminated such data as your social security number, weight, height, age, marital status, religion, and race?
13. Have you eliminated high school information?

In Summary

Employers don't read resumes ... they skim them. Think of your resume as a marketing tool or piece of advertising rather than as a comprehensive data sheet. Margins, spacing and bullets can make it easily skimmed.

The one who gets the job is not always the one who can do the job best, but who knows best how to get the job! Each detail of this process should have your meticulous attention since people are often screened out on the basis of a poorly written resume and/or cover letter.

We are here to help! Remember, the staff in Career Services are available to review your resume and help you best market yourself to employers. Call the office to set up a time to have your resume critiqued. We also have resume samples and books about resume writing in our Career Resource Library.

Your resume is a reflection of you – your skills, education and experience. Make certain you spend the time and effort to develop a professional document that will help you in your job or internship application process.

“You never get a second chance to make a good first impression!”

Resume Samples

Samples of various resume formats are provided on the following pages to assist you in creating your own resume. Keep in mind that these are samples – your resume will be unique based upon your education, skills and experience.

For assistance in developing your resume, use these guidelines to write a draft of the resume, then make an appointment to visit with a staff member in Career Services. The staff will be able to review your draft and provide input how to best convey your thoughts in a clear, concise and professional manner.

FUNCTIONAL RESUME

A functional resume highlights areas of strength or skill that both describe experiences and relate to eventual career goals. Titles and employers are emphasized less.

Best to use when:

- You have had a variety of work experiences that might be relatively unrelated
- Job and activity titles are not directly related to career goal
- You are applying for different positions requiring the same skills
